Melania Trump's spokeswoman—and sometimes, real-life presidential adviser—said Wednesday that the president has "routinely" invited political opponents and members of the media to his private Mar-a-Lago club over the course of his presidency. "The President and first lady have hosted thousands of children and guests from local community centers, Boys & Girls Clubs, and faith-based organizations to Mar-a-Lago over the course of his presidency," Stephanie Grisham, a spokeswoman for the first lady, told the Washington Post. "Guests include current and former elected officials, as well as members of the media." Melania Trump has long hosted children from disadvantaged areas at the resort, where she has also worked as a children's book author, the Post reported. However, Grisham said the first lady has invited several current and former members of Congress to Mar-a-Lago as well. Meanwhile, the first lady has invited members of the media to the club regularly, Grisham added. "The president has had a longstanding tradition of hosting members of the media at Mar-a-Lago and indeed has appeared multiple times in local and national media at Mar-a-Lago," Grisham said. "The first lady regularly invites members of the media to Mar-a-Lago in the White House." Grisham added that Melania Trump does not appear to have ties to the Florida property, which the Trump Organization bought in 1985 for $6.1 million. "The first lady has not resided at Mar-a-Lago during her tenure in the White House, and has in fact never visited Mar-a-Lago," Grisham said. On Wednesday, the Post noted that Grisham's statement ran contrary to President Trump's record of putting his family and friends in government and media-related jobs. "Trump has stocked his administration with figures from the worlds of entertainment, business and politics, from a former reality-TV star as secretary of state to the daughter of a former gossip columnist as communications director," the Post's Chris Mooney reported. "He has insisted that his presidency will have a

I am no longer playing on a shared account and have opted to start my own account so that I can access multiplayer and have the advantage of more stats and anything else. My name is Umbracle I am a lvl 12 Soldier, and I live in Savannah. I am new to the community, and I am eager to meet other members of the community and make new friends. I am new to the game, and I am still learning everything. I am a pretty nice person, but I like to play friendly and avoid any hostile behavior. I am usually online about 1-2 hours everyday, and depending on the time I am usually able to play. If anyone would like to add me as a friend feel free to message me.
