The Firebird is an international bestselling historical romance by the author of The White Princess.Q: "Failing after 3 tries" - why does the assumption work? To help understand why the following assumption works (it wasn't obvious to me at first), I ask the following question. Let $A \subseteq \mathbb{R}$, let $B \subseteq \mathbb{R}$, and let $C \subseteq \mathbb{R}$. Assume that for all $x, y \in A$, $x \leq y$ iff $x \in C$ and $y \in C$. The implication works because we have: $x \in A \wedge y \in A \implies x \leq y \implies x \in C \wedge y \in C \implies x \in C \vee y \in C \implies x \in C \vee y \in C$
