Aspects of the present invention relate to a system for communicating information between a plurality of users and, in particular, to a system for communicating information between a plurality of users via an audio communication terminal. Conventionally, when users attempt to communicate information to each other using an audio communication terminal such as a facsimile machine or a public telephone line, each user selects an audio communication terminal to communicate with another user from a plurality of audio communication terminals. When users attempt to make audio communication, normally each user selects an audio communication terminal from a plurality of audio communication terminals to communicate with another user. Moreover, for the audio communication terminal in use, upon power-on, the address of a communication partner and the status of the communication are registered into an address table for managing the address of each communication partner. The address table is usually stored in a non-volatile semiconductor memory. Upon power-off, upon power-on or upon connection with an audio communication terminal, the audio communication terminal reads the address of a communication partner from the address table and then, starts communicating with the communication partner. Since users can make calls to and receive calls from a plurality of audio communication terminals, there is a need to register the status of the communication partner into the address table for managing the address of each communication partner. For example, when the user uses the audio communication terminal while

The c-erbB-2 gene encodes the epidermal growth factor receptor (EGF-R), a membrane receptor which is implicated in tumor development of human esophageal epithelial cells. Aberrant methylation of the promoter region of this gene has been observed in some other carcinomas. We analyzed the methylation status of the c-erbB-2 gene in an esophageal epithelial cell line TE-1 in which neoplastic transformation has occurred after long-term cultivation. The methylation of the promoter region was examined by the restriction enzyme-mediated methylation assay. The methylation was detected in TE-1 cells, but not in TE-1 derivatives, TE-1-2T1 and TE-1-2T2 which were established after transfection with a temperature-sensitive replication factor C mutant gene. These results suggest that the methylation of the promoter region of the c-erbB-2 gene may occur in neoplastic transformation of human esophageal epithelial cells. Q. C# Exponential Decrease I'm trying to do an exponential decrease method in C#. I want to decrease the number 10 by 1 every 10 seconds until it's 0.
